Bi-Bi Bill -$345M

OTTAWA (CP) The federal government's attempts to create a bilingual public service could cost about $345 million if past and present expenditures are projected to the end of 1978.

The figure is based on past costs, salaries to employees on language courses, expense of translation, the cost of monitoring the public service to ensure services are available in both French and English and the expense of making about 19,000 public servants bilingual by the target date of

But while the figures upon which the $345 million is calculated are factually correct, David Morley, deputy secretary of the treasury board's official languages branch, says he is unable to forecast what more ways he spent on what money may be spent on the program in the next 412

The rain in Vancouver fell mainly on the Edmonton Eskimos during Sunday's Grey Cup game and Montreal. Alouettes found a silver lining in the form of a 20-7 victory in the Canadian football final. There was little silver for the scalpers outside Empire Stadium, though. The weather washed out any chance of a quick profit and tickets were going at $1 each by kickoff time. Travel Control In Bill

LONDON (UPI) - The gov ernment announced plans today to outlaw the Irish Republican Army (IRA) and other such organizations in Britain to try to curb a wave of bombings that has left a toll of 48 dead and 750 injured here in two years.

Home Secretary Roy Jen-kins made the announcement to a packed, frequently cheer-ing House of Commons soon after six men, all born in Northern Ireland, were ar-raigned on murder charges in pub bombings in Birmingham last Thursday that killed 19 and wounded 184.

Although Jenkins did not refer specifically to the Bir-mingham bombings, police had attributed them to the IRA which has denied them.

The IRA is banned in Northern Ireland and the Irish Re-public but until now has not been outlawed in Britain. Its aim is to drive the British Army out of Northern Ireland. Jenkins said the govern-ment will introduce the neces-sary legislation in parliament Wednesday and hopes to push

TWO HEARTS DOING WELL

CARE TOWN - South Africa (CP) - Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the heart transplant pioneer, implanted a second heart in the chest of a 58-year-old man this morning, Groote Schuur Hospital announced.

It was the first time a new heart was implanted without removal of the diseased heart.

Barnard said the unidentified man's own heart was the worst he had even seen but that he showed a marked improvement immediately after the surgery. The man was reported in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit with both hearts beating together.

"The old heart takes care of as much as it can. What it can't handle is taken care of by the new heart," Bar-ard said at a news conference.

The heart transplant team, making its 11th operation, began the five-hour surgery at midnight Sunday night. The heart used was that of a 10-year-old Cape Town girl killed A hospital spokesman said that after the child was clinically dead, her heart was kept beating artificially inside her body until the life-saving surgery could begin. The South African Press Association said the recipient is married with children. Barnard said the right side of patient's own heart was mal but that multiple heart attacks had practically de-yed the left side. He said he cut away 40 per cent of the left ventricle and placed the two left ventricles side by Barnard said he connected the atriums and aortas and that when pressure built up, blood flowed into the donor heart. Each heart has its own pacemaker, he said, and techniques are being worked out to synchronize the two heartbeats. The hospital spokesman said the added heart would "improve the patient's blood circulation."

The transplant team has been researching the new surgery for some time, and Barnard stressed that it is a

The Sellout Comes Home to Roost

The federal government's announcement that it will cut domestic oil exports to the United States by 100,000 barrels per day next January and progressively eliminate Canadian oil exports to the U.S. by 1983 is a classic example of closing the barn door after the horse has escaped. Despite warnings from resource experts, a score of books on the subject and last years' international oil crisis, the government has blithely continued to export about half of Canada's daily oil production to the United States, amounting to between 900,-000 and one million barrels per

Faced with a National Energy Board which bluntly states that Canada would lose its oil self-sufficiency in 7.3 years unless it drastically reduced exports, the government has reacted in its usual panic-stricken manner when confronted by a crisis, which came from the Trudeau administration's procrastination. Nor could the reversal in oil policy have occurred at a worse time in Canadian-U.S. trade relations. We are already embroiled in a mini-trade dispute with the Americans over mutual beef import quotas. Some elements of congress - notably those who refer to us as the "Arabs of the North" - will construe the oil export cutbacks as the opening salvo in a full-fledged trade war. The issue might have been painlessly resolved years ago if the Canadian government had taken the advice of its own experts then and slowly reduced oil exports to the U.S. over a period of years. Canada's new policy, hastily wrought and breathlessly announced, coming in the middle of a world-wide energy crisis, alienates our best customer and confirms the myth of a national energy policy. "How is it that we have so much oil in this country and yet we are importing so much, and importing at other people's prices?" asked a naive Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

The NEB answered Macdonald's question last week. The Liberal government's sellout of our natural resources over the years is finally coming home to roost in the form of lack of national petroleum reserves. Federal taxation policies resulted in many Canadian drilling rigs heading for the more favorable tax climate in the U.S. Even the 100 per cent write-off for exploration costs contained in the budget won't change things, according to industry spokesmen. The implications in the NEB report are frightening for this country. In the next seven years we have three choices: resign ourselves to paying exorbitant prices for imported oil, if we can find any to buy; develop new kinds of energy; encourage petroleum exploration with more incentives. The first choice is repugnant, the second is long-range and the third is imperative. Once again, foreign-owned oil companies have us over a barrel because of the government's past sellout policies. In order to give impetus to exploration it appears the government will have to amend its resource taxation proposals contained in the recent budget. Meanwhile, the sudden cutbacks in oil exports are a confession of government bankruptcy in the management of Canadian energy resources.

Charlie, or Charles Hill Graham as he is formally known, is a tall, thin, wellgroomed young man with thick wirerimmed spectacles who describes himself as "a professional fund-raiser and marketing person." The Liberal party prefers to think of him as their "director of fund-raising." He was hired, according to an official party document, to "organize and promote fund-raising activities and to develop requirements of the new Election Expenses Act.

In simpler terms, Charlie is a sort of one-man J. Walter Thompson, engaged by the Liberal party to teach the faithful the art of door-to-door soliciting. The goal-to raise $11 million before the next federal election rolls around.

It is not, as Senator Molgat concedes going to be an easy task. The senator insisted that this was not why the press was invited to Liberal headquarters Thursday afternoon. He explained that numbers of reporters had been calling in recent days to find out how the Liberals were coping with the new election act. and so he thought he'd just ask them down for a chat.

which, of course, really costs them only deductible.

"If we start them . . . at $100 we can work them up or down depending upon their state of dismay," he says.

Two weeks ago, the party in B.C. ran big ads in the large daily newspapers. Charlie reported that the ads were "pulling well," and that one Vancouver TV station had done a four-minute piece based on the newspaper ads.

The B.C. party, he reports, has $35,000 in the bank "as of this morning." Workers in the province hope to raise $128,000 this year and $235,000 in 1975. Charlie sums up his presentation with a humorous pitch to the assembled scribes. Today, he says, is as good a day as any to "make a commitment" to give to the party of their choice.

California Background

One reporter then asked Charlie his background and it was disclosed that he had worked in California before returning to Ottawa via B.C. Asked whether he had done any previous fund-raising, Charlie answered in the affirmative, and then added: "I've done volunteer fundraising at an extremely low level just for the hell of it.

Re-enter Senator Molgat, who had earlier described the new elections act in rather loftier terms than Charlie. "It is a great act," he says, "which will transform Canadian politics." The senator explains at length the structure of the Liberal party. He tells reporters that he can give no precise estimates of the amount of money that will have to be raised for the next federal campaign, but agrees that it will be in the neighborhood of $11 million, of which about $4 million will have to be solicited from individuals at the doorstep level. Molgat says he can't say what perbut agrees that the task facing the party under the new legislation will be to substitute small donors for the corporate donors. Both Molgat and Charlie are adamant on one point: There will be no fiddling to avoid the spirit of the new law. That order, they said, came directly from the prime minister.

Always It's the 'Other' Guy

The opposition parties in the British Columbia legislature, especially Social Credit, are a confident, almost cocky lot. They are convinced beyond the tiniest doubt that the governing New Democratic Party is heading for defeat at the next provincial election after just a single term in office. Saanich and the Islands MLA Hugh Curtis told 60 Social Crediters in Oak Bay last week that Social Credit will replace the socialists in government next time around. It may happen - it would be one of the wilder swings in voter preference in the province's wild political history, almost as surprising as the NDP's amazing upset victory in

But in one respect, such an occurrence would bring about no change at all. In Curtis' words to the party faithful, it would take at least two to four years - probably an entire term in office - to clean up after the NDP and rectify all its mistakes. So Social Credit seems to be expecting at least a two-year honeymoon, free of all criticism, once it gains power. If anyone does venture a critical comment, back will come the all-purpose reply that the party inherited all its problems and shouldn't be blamed.

It's a familiar refrain. Premier Dave Barrett and his cabinet ministers use it all the time when challenged about some neglected problem area that's burst into a crisis and is an embarrassment to his action-oriented administration.

We inherited it from our predecessors, goes the reply, and after 20 years of bungling we can't be expected to put things right over-

Probably voters will hear the same words if they elect Social Credit to power and make Bill Bennett premier. There's some justification (and no small amount of political mileage) in blaming your present wees on past errors of former administrations, but it's become a rather contrived and shabby defence through excessive

No doubt a determined politician of historical bent could fix all responsibility for present day messes upon Sir James Douglas or Amor De Cosmos. Some slim connection of cause and effect probably exists. What an election slogan, promising to remedy A Century of Neglect! That would carry the silly worn-out practice to its ultimate absurd but completely logical end. The mind's eye conjures up a long row of politicians stretching back into the ages, each pointing an accusing finger at the one who came before. Little wonder that the forthright American phrase "the buck stops here" never seemed to catch on among Canadian politicians. It should have.

FRANK RUTTER

It's Up to Ford and Trudeau

WASHINGTON - The "beef war" has precipitated a climate of recrimination and inflexibility in Canada-U.S. trade relations which perhaps can be resolved only at the highest level, between President Gerald Ford and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Not since the dark days of 1971 has there been such squalling and trumpeting on either side of the border on an economic issue.

The latest manoeuvres in this $100million brouhaha - the dollar figure is the trade each side is losing - are:

Aggrieved reaction in Ottawa to the tough import quotas imposed on meat and livestock by Ford last weekend, with Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan reportedly threatening to come down here and set things straight.

Obstinate response from the state department that the U.S. quotas "will be rescinded the instant Canadian ones

Keep Things Cool

The officials involved in previous talks tried to keep things cool, but those talks did not solve the problem.

However, officials on both sides do agree that agricultural trade could be a major topic for Ford and Trudeau when they meet here on Dec. 4. The basic conflict at this moment is that the U.S. thinks Canada is practising trade protectionism while Canada thinks the U.S. has indulged in massive overkill.

But the over-all picture is much more complex than that, and it covers a broader spectrum of agricultural trade than beef. The U.S. is upset about a number of products with which it feels Canada is not playing fair, including eggs, poultry and cheese as well as beef cattle and hogs.

Canada is upset about U.S. economic policies going back three years, and while prepared to cast much of the on the hopless former president Richard Nixon, suspects that Ford is unable or unwilling to repair the damage

It was in 1971 that Nixon and his treasury secretary, John Connally, fanned flames of national indignation in Canada by such policies as a blanket surcharge on imports. The beef problem goes back at least to last year. "The reason is mainly their fiddling with the economy, with their price controls and pressures and their soybean export embargoes," said a Canadian of-"They have created abnormal flows in the market."

The outcome was last weekend's quota system imposed by Ford in retali-

The Canadian official conceded that the U.S. had been moving away from agriculturad subsidies and barriers to trade, but he said that the Americans have not "got the message" that Canada is ardently for free trade. "We need to get the point across that what we have done in eggs, turkeys and heef is not a reflection of protectionism. "We can't survive on protect tionism. We've got even more to gain from free trade.'

Canada Protectionist

Clearly, the point has not come across. Ford's action on quotas followed meetings with agricultural organizations and a public hearing at which the view was freely expressed that Canada has been pursuing a protectionist policy illconcealed by all sorts of excuses, such as its ban on U.S. beef earlier in the year on grounds that the Americans did not have an adequate health inspection system to ensure that the hormone DES (diethylstilbestrol) was not being used. The Americans also have been investigating Canada's egg-marketing practices as well as the re-export from Canada of subsidized European cheeses which are not allowed to enter the U.S. directly from Common Market producers.

Both sides maintain they want to sit down and try to reach sensible agreements on agricultural problems.

Officials at the "technical" level-the bureaucrats - held several meetings earlier this year and failed to reach agreement on beef. The matter was raised, also without success, at the ninisterial level when State Secretary Henri Kissinger met External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen in New York

60 YEARS AGO From the Times of Novmeber 25, 1914

OTTAWA - Conditions of unemployment in western Canada are generally speaking no worse than in eastern centres. That is the gist of a report on labor conditions in the west prepared by two fair-wage officers of the federal department of labor. Many of those affected by unemployment are Germans and Austrians who will be provided for by internment regulations. Alberta and British Columbia have perhaps suffered most by lack of jobs, owning to the shutdown of mines and lumber camps. In Alberta 9,000 miners are out of work and production has fallen 36 per cent. In Winnipeg there are 3,600 men, mostly unskilled, out of work, while in Saskatoon and Moose Jaw some 900 men are jobless. In Vancouver the figure is 8,000 unemployed and 3,000 in Victoria.

And just as international treaties do not prevent wars, we find that laws do not nec-essarily prevent strikes. There are problems in human relations which consolved by law alone. which cannot be

A basic human cause of unrest is that we are living in of the good things of life.

Industry encourages and in-tensifies the demands of the people by mass advertising and the styles of living it portrays. These demands are fur-ther intensified by banks and courage and facilitate borrowing the money to attain those styles. Hence, the phenomenal increase in consumer debt.

As the younger generation of workers takes over, trade unions become more militant in their demands and the older trade union leaders face rebellion if they cannot suction gap in the work force now manifests itself which create undue expectations among the workers, when they know they will have to compromise in the negotiations, labor laws are not going to put an end to the growing desire for higher living stan-dards. After all, this is a goal of our economic system In a period of galloping in mand wage increases which go beyond what the public has been accustomed to expect.

This should not surprise us. Wages fixed under two and three year agreements tend to lag behind when the rate of inflation is higher than was forseen at the time the agreements were negotiated. these circumstances, the worker feels that he is en-titled to a "catchup" increase to compensate for a loss in real income caused by higher prices. The unions are, of course, then blamed for the inflation.

In contrast, manufacturers retailers, landlords and bankers do not have to bargain for and to justify increases in prices, mark-ups, rents or in-terest. The difference is im-portant in its effects on the public attitude to trade unions and the reaction of the

I have referred to the in-creasing influence of the gen-eration gap in the work force. We find that the younger workers are more militant in their relations with both the employer and their own union leadership and are often largely responsible for the re-jection of agreements pego-tiated by the union officers. By CARL GOLDENBERG

(Senator Goldenberg is a veteran mediator in Canadian labor · management disputes. These remarks were made at month).

However, here, too, there are underlying human consider-ations. For example, the se-niority rule, a basic provision for longer-service employees as well as a preference with respect to other benefits. One of these preferences is fre-quently the choice of vacation schedules. The older workers can thus choose to take their vacation in July and August, when the schools are closed; while the younger workers, with schoolage children, are prevented from taking a holiday with their children

This causes discontent and, in my experience, contributed to the rejection of an agree-ment negotiated in the month of July a number of years ago, because, by going on strike, the younger workers would for the first time be able to enjoy an August vacation with their children.

Another instance of the gen eration gap in its effect on col-lective bargaining is the difference in attitude towards increased pensions, in which the older worker is naturally more interested, as against i m m dediate wage gains, which are of greater concern to the young than is future se-workers is also affected by job boredom, by monotonous and, to a degree, dehumanizing work. On the assembly line, for example, each employee is given a single task which be repeats every time a which he repeats every time a unit passes his point of the line. If the plant produces 60 automobiles an hour, he tight ens a bolt or connects a head-light 60 times an hour.

The monotony of the tasks on the assembly line is now a major cause of absenteeism, alcoholism and high labor turnover. It tends to alienate the younger and better educated workers of today. They are more mobile and less at tached to the job as such than those who preceded them. They give vent to their frustrations in militancy and many even prefer a strike to a settlement as a relief from the monotony of their jobs

Enlightened employers in America and in Europe are now recognizing the gravity of this problem and are seeking methods for "humanizing the work place.'

I now turn to a basic cause of industrial unrest affecting both young and old. It is insecurity flowing from the fear of displacement because of technological change. Men trained in particular skills may find that such skills are no longer required because they have been replaced by macnines.

It is the human anxiety for job security and fear of unemployment that lies at the root of some major industrial conflicts in recent years and threatens further and continu-ous serius unrest unless the problem is dealt with fairly.

There is, fortunately, growing realization that, be-fore introducing changes which will displace or otherwise materially affect its workers, it is the responsibility of management to give sult and seek agreement with the union representing its employees on the best means of adjusting to the changes, and to provide for compensation and where possible, retrainment of the theory of the t ing or relocation for the employees to be displaced.

Considering the human fac tors which may be involved, I am afraid that there is no cure-all for settling all industrial disputes-without strikes or lockouts. When we look to themselves cannot solve the problems tlowing from the conflict of interests that gives rise to industrial disputes.

Nonetheless, there are alternatives to confrontation for the settlement of disputes. here is third-party mediation which, in my own experience, has operated successfully in some major disputes. There is also the possibility of recourse voluntary arbitation by a third party.

Such should be encouraged and publicized. We must, however, be patient and tolerant that peace is just around the Guess Who Wins From Inflation?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Almost everybody is almost fits from inflation in the short

Arthur J. R. Smith offered some facts in Montreal last week. Mr. Smith is a former chairman of the Economic Council of Canada and the president of the Conference Board in Canada. The Conference Board is one of the most

Mr. Smith based his find-ings on the latest statistics available, those for the year ending in the second quarter of 1974.

ture of this year, he said, had been "the huge growth in the income of governments." "Nearly half of the increase in total money income in Can-ada has gone, at least in the first instance, to govern-ments," mostly from in-creased tax revenues. "The increase in total revenues of all governments has been in the vicinity of 20 per cent which is above the rate of increase in total national income. At the same time, the prices of the goods and services purchased by governments have risen by about 10 per cent.

All of which adds up to a very handsome increase in income for governments, and hands them greater direct and indirect command over the economy.

Two groups, says Mr. Smith, "have clearly greatly improved their relative positions" during the year. One is farmers, who have made huge gains (but started, it should be noted, from a comparatively poor position).

The other group will come as a surprise to most Canadians. This is the group whose income "consists primarily of investment income and-or government transfer payments... Both of these forms of income have increased sub-stantially more than the consumer price index." People with low incomes derive "a very substantial proportion" of their support from these two sources. They include pensioners, the disadvantaged, the unemployed, those on welfare. Although Mr. on welfare. Although Mr. Smith did not mention it, their position has been improved by indexing of some government payments to the cost of living, by increasing other payments, and by tax benefits, "In-deed," said Mr. Smith, "those outside the labor force, as well as the unemployed, ap-pear, on average, to have gained relative to those who have been employed."

Wage and salary earners, on the average, were actually in a worse position at the end of the year than at the beginfringe benefits, rose only at about the same rate as the consumer price index. "On top of this," said Mr. Smith, have increased by about 18 per cent, so that 'after tax' average real spending power

So has that of small businessmen. Even lumped with the high-earning professions their average gain was only half the rate of the national income gain, which means that in actuality it was probably much lower.

Then there are corporations. Their average increase in profits looked high per cent over a year earlier But part of this gain was "fice titious", being the inflated values of inventories which, though taxed as operating profits, when inventories must be replaced at higher costs". cent, and after payment of dividends to about 12 per cent -which is just about "the increase in the prices and costs of new business plant and equipment expenditures - in fact, perhaps slightly less. Thus, in real terms, such retained earnings have been virtually zero, possibly even

The corporate sector of the Canadian economy has, in fact," says Mr. Smith "lost ground rather than benefitted under the conditions of rising

That was what the collapsing stock market was trying to tell us: that many Canadian corporations couldn't expand to meet demand and combat inflation because they lacked internal savings couldn't float new equity issues, had to go into debt financing at high interests and were, seriously undercapitalized. But if jobs are to be created and social needs met, "an essential requiretained growth of new business

Mr. Smith pretended to no prescription for beating inflation. But he did show that the big inflation winner, with its General Amin is no longer on speaking terms with his three sisters and his brother. pening inside Uganda, is the culmination of a series of events following the brutal murder of Amin's wife, Kay, ordered by him.

Amin's own life is in constant jeopardy. Recently two air force officers planned to shoot him down as he was flybecause his flight was divert-

I was given a first-hand account of life at Idi Amin's court by a prominent Ugandan who has been at his side ever since Amin's military coup in January, 1971. Because his family is still inside Uganda, he asked me to keep his name and the place of our

The story begins with the arrest and murder of Amin's former foreign secretary, Michael Ondoga, on March 6. Amin is said to have been jealous of Ondoga's close friendship with Princess Eli-zabeth Bagayya, whom Amin made foreign secretary in On-doga's place before the latter was murdered.

8.10 a.m., as he was dropping his two-year-old daughter at the kindergarten of the Naka-sero primary school. The child was left screaming on the pavement as five men bundled her father into a car Ondoga's body was found in the Nile River a few days

Kay Amin, whose Lugbara family is close to that of Michael Ondoga, intervened vi-gorously with her husband to save Ondoga's life. When she learned later that he had been killed, she left Amin's house and went to live on her own.

To cover the shame of her leaving him, Amin publicly announced that he was dissolving his Muslim marriages with his three wives. The first foreign minister, Wanume Kibedi, had been set who aside after her brother's de- into fection.

The news of Amin's di-vorces greatly upset his old father, who had earlier be-come estranged from his son. He sent his daughters to tell Amin of his displeasure. Amin raved about them, and his threats against the old man were such as to persuade the father that the time had come his son's reach.

> Amin ordered the arrest of Kay's brother, Wilson Adroa, who subsequently escaped into Zaire. But Kay was less of an abortion. The real story of her death is bizarre.

Far from being pregnant, she had suffered from menstrual difficulties ever since and from acute sinusitis. On August 11, she arranged to go to the clinic of her family doctor, Mbalu-Mukasa, for treathouse locked and no sign of

When she gained admission she found the doctor's wife and five children unconscious. Two of the children subsequently died. All had been poisoned.

She found the doctor dead in his garage. He, too, 'had his car, she found the body of and the back of her head beaub in a packing case.

Amin ordered the body to be taken to Mulago hospital, where he brought his four children by Kay. Speaking in front of the hospital staff, he said to the children: "Pray to Allah for your mother, who has died in sin." He then made an impassioned little speech saying he had nothing. speech, saying he had nothing to do with her death. My informant tells me that

Then there is the argument that the television cameras would bring out the ham in some honorable members, producing political sideshows for the benefit of the TV audience, and that this would constipate the proceedings even further. Probably true, too.

Failure to pay rent and damage to apartments, though, accounted for only about 20 to 30 per cent of evictions. All the other cases were what Hutton calls "tenanttenant" problems.

"There are an awful lot of extremely bad tenants and generally speaking they are younger people," he said. "I have had to move very strongly to protect the rights of other ten-ants, and when I did stand up it was like the Lone Ranger riding into a strange, tough town. I've had to tackle a heroin addict ... struggle with law-breakers and toughs."

More often than not Hutton said, the response to any complaint or re-quest in such cases is an obscenity. In one instance the tenant's reaction was to spend several minutes careering wildly around the parking lot in his tiresquealing car.

Being a Plaintive Plea From the Lonely-Hearts

Dearest Judy, Jill and Jenny:

You will be wondering I suppose, why I should be writing you this joint letter, my very first. Well, I just felt that you would want to know of the heart-breaking scene that occurs almost every day up on our road.

There are, you see, these two very old people who stand

There are, you see, these two very old people who stand there by the mail box, pulling their shawls tighter to keep out the winter's chill. Their lined, ancient faces light up pathetically when, far down the road, they see the mailman's car. The ugly old man turns to the sweet old lady. His face lights up with idiot hope. "Will this be the day, perhaps?" he croaks. Then, suddenly, the mailman's car is whizzing by. The old couple, crushed again, their shoulders sagging, totter off to the old shee in which they live. off to the old shoe in which they live.

It's not that your mother and I expect a letter every day, you see, or even every week. Heck, no. We knew, as all parents must know, that when you went out into the cold, cruel world, away from the nest, that you'd have lives of your own and that, at best, we might hear from you only now and then. But where is the now? Where is the then? And where are you, my darling daughters?

You will say of course as you have before that writing.

You will say, of course, as you have before, that writing is baddy's business (you did know that, didn't you?) and that since you had elected to follow other, more sensible careers, you should be forgiven for the course of the you should be forgiven for not consigning to paper the details of your varied lives out there.

I want to make it perfectly clear, as the man said, that I do not want literature from you. A stenographic report will do. I am not after deathless prose. Neither is your mother. All we want is a letter, just one lousy little old letter. If it is all in words of one syllable we will not care, I mean if you draw pictures that will be enough. Make a mark and mail it.

Oh, I know. Letter-writing has gone out of style. You do phone, occasionally. I'll give you that, even if it is collect. But we're dreadfully old-fashioned, you see. A phone call is like a Chinese dinner. You're hungry 20 minutes later. I think, particularly, Judy, of your last call from South Africa. With all the crying that was going on I just can't remember anything that was said, here or there.

I know, too that we're not alone in this parental dilement.

anything that was said, here or there.

I know, too, that we're not alone in this parental dilemma. Just down the road from us I often see the Jenkins, themselves waiting patiently, their shawls wrapped around them, for some word—any word—from the son who, I gather, sent them a post card from Guatemala some 18 months ago saying, "Having a wonderful time—wish you were here." And was never heard from again.

Even so, I think we deserve better treatment, I mean if you add it all up there's about 60 years of clothing and feed-

you add it all up there's about 60 years of clothing and feed-ing that we've invested and when you consider that all we ask is an occasional paragraph in return it doesn't seem too

And it's not as if you didn't have all sorts of interesting things to write about. People say to us, "My goodness, it must be an eye-opener having a daughter actually living there in Africa in this time of momentous change. you tell them, Judy, that the last news you had was about the time of the Boer rebellion? Or people say, "Is it true that your middle daughter is working with Liza Minnelli making a movie in Mexico?" How do you tell them, Jill, that you haven't the faintest idea? Or, again, people ask how Andy is making out there in Castlegar in his last year of training as an airline pilot. What do you tell them, Jenny, when the mailman has passed you by week after week?

I have thought of various ways to coax you into the most elementary kind of communication. I have thought of making out forms, for example, giving you each a multiple choice so that all you'd have to do is to check-off the appropriate answer. Like: I am feeling (a) fine; (b) getting over a cold; (c) rotten. Or, We have been enjoying the weather here except for (a) the hurricane; (b) the typhoon; or (c) the record snowfall. But since I abhor forms myself and since you all live in such different places and styles I've given that up. Oh, I know that you still love us or I comfort myself with that illusion and I know you must think of us from time to time, but I tell you, my dears, if you don't put it down in:

writing mighty soon we will be just as cross as bears.

per cen ptlunge in new car sales in mid-November means lengthy layoffs for more than 200,000 workers and the closing of half of North America's auto assembly plants before Christmas.

The number of workers on short and long-term layoffs will climb from about 100,000 in this holiday-shortened U.S. Thanksgiving week to more than 200,000 in the weeks becompared with $169,000 or 10 fore Christmas.

About 85,000 workers will not return to their jobs after the scheduled Christmas-New Year's holiday.

The Nov. 11-20 sales report due late today was cited by analysts as a prime reason for the almost daily announcements of layoffs from automakers last week.

It has caused unexpected production problems that have reduced natural gas prothat duction from the Beaver cated than coning since no River field, 770 miles gas was being produced there. northwest of Fort Nelson, to less than 40 million cubic feet a day from a peak of 240

Amoco engineers and geologists know what's wrong — water has somehow entered the field's gas wells they don't know why it's there or how to get rid of it.

Beaver River is a major gas field in British Columbia, with estimated deliverable re-serves of 1,300 billion cubic feet, about 13 per cent of the provincial total.

Gas produced from Beaver River and the Pointed Mountain field in the Northwest Territories. 75 miles north of Beaver River, is all contracted to Westcoast Transmission Co. of Vancouver, which sells it in B.C. and to northwestern DRILL NEW WELL states. Both fields are in the same belt, but so far "there has been no problem at Pointed Mountain," an Amoco spokesman says. Amoco has invested $34 million at Beaver River and $30 million at Pointed Mountain. The three production wells at Pointed Mountain are producing their contracted amount of 90 million cubic feet a day. In September, 1972, Amoco engineers found that one of the six wells at Beaver River was producing water after being on stream only several

Then in July, 1973, a second well began pumping water to the surface, a signal that there was real trouble.

Amoco drilled its first well at Beaver River in 1958 and for a long time the field looked great. Now in retrospect, Amoco engineers wished they had known more about the aquifer, the watersoaked rock lying beneath the gas field.

Arriving at what they hoped was the solution, Amoco engineers decided to slow down the rate of production on the theory that it would be a "coning" phenomenon—that is, rapid removal of gas causes a sudden drop in un-

VANCOUVER - For the very briefest of moments Sunday morning it looked as if the rains might hold off and at least it would be pleasant for the players and fans for the

But that was before game time, and no such luck either. For suddenly, the heavens opened up again, as they had all week, and abetted by a southerly breeze that at times approached gale proportions, the stadium was a miserable site indeed, and no fit place, for man, or beast or reporters officials did do their utmost. They had their very best heavy roller in operation, trying to get the water squished down the drains, which were already full and they also brought out their brand new $20,000 game saver. This was supposed to suck up the moisture and then deposit it elsewhere.

Neither stood a chance. The field was soaking wet to begin with, and the water was at least two inches deep on the sidelines on top of the tartan turf when the game ended. Ten "game savers" wouldn't have been enough.

Meanwhile, outside the stadium, and even in the fover, hawkers were desperately trying to get rid of their wares; and sealpers, their tickets. Business had been poor downtown and prices had been dropping drastically as game-day approached. The horns were the best sellers, going for anywhere from $1 to $3: But the tickets? No way! Radio stations were broadcasting they had some available, one advertising agency had 250 for sale on Saturday; and on Sunday, in that weather there was nobody coming to the Stadium just looking weather there was nobody coming to the Stadium just looking for a ticket. At least not many. And just before game time, one individual finally gave up and threw in the towel. He offered all his tickets, and that was more than a few, for "a buck each." Even then he didn't exactly find a seller's

Meanwhile, early arrivals inside the stadium, besides getting well fortified, were in for a rare treat. Because just as the mop-up brigade was doing its best, Dave Cutler and his Edmonton Eskimo mates hove on the field for a big reception and a pre-game warm-up. While the linemen ran through their drills, Cutler set up shop at midfield — that's 55 pards away from the goalposts — and promptly proceeded to start kicking the ball past the dead ball line. He also connected on four out of seven through the posts from midfield, accompanied by the oohs and aahs from the faithful.

Then he moved back five yards to the 50, and drilled his first effort from 60 yards right through the uprights. Of course, he had the wind at his back, but it was an impressive display nonetheless and with Edmonton having the wind at their back in the first quarter, hell, kicking like that, there shouldn't be any problem.

A few minutes later the Alouettes appeared on the field.

The crowd was still mumbling - about Cutler, Wasn't he the western scoring leader and wouldn't his toe make the dif-

So what happens? The only time Cutler gets to kick in the entire game is after the first and only Edmonton touchdown by Calvin Harrell. The Eskimos simply never got close ugh again and, for the first time this season, Cutler was denied the opportunity to prove his worth.

Meanwhile, what about Sweet, who set a Grey Cup record of four field goals and, with any luck, might have had a couple more? Twice he missed, and twice there had been bad snaps from centre and he never got to kick the ball.

If Montreal Alouettes were about to prove themselves the most underrated team in Canada, Sweet was, doing a pretty

And sure enough, the B.C. Lions once had the playing rights to Sweet, who is a Lord Byng grad, and didn't become a placekicker until his third year in college at Washington State where he had transferred after getting a baseball scholarship at Wenatchee Junior College.

But the Lions traded him in 1972 — to Montreal.

For the Cougars, it was their 10th straight win, their unbeaten streak going back to Oct. 29 when they dropped a 5-3 decision at home to Regina Pats.

The victory also gives Cougars an 11-point bulge in the race for first place in the Western Canada Hockey League's Western Division. Cents will also provide the Couggars with heir next op-position Tuesday when the two clubs tangle again at Me-morial Arena at 8 p.m.

Saturday it looked as if the Cougars would skate the lowly Cents right out of the rink. After two periods, Cougars held a commanding 5-1 edge, a score indicative of their control of the play.

But the Cents, who were after their second win of the season, bounced back early in the third period on two quick goals as they narrowed the score to 5-3.

Get ready for the long, hard winter of 1978.

The tough 1975 Renaults will pull you through. Beautifully.

The new 1975 Renaults are here. Just in time for the winter ahead and many winters to come (summers too!). And they're solid, rugged, more comfortable than ever. In addition to our world-famous fuel economy and well-seasoned frontwheel drive system (which assures road holding and complete safety in all weather), the new 1975 Renaults offer improvements, maintenance economies and new ideas that make Renault better value than ever.

Some improvements you can see, such as the wide range of glowing new exterior colours and the mix-and-match interior fabrics with vinyl reinforcement that looks and wears like real

Others you can't see because they're hidden in the works, but they contribute to Renault's mechanical dependability in all weather conditions, to the point where maintenance inspections are recommended only every 9,000 miles. There are also new rustproofing techniques that help Renault stand off the worst possible weather.

Though Renault is an economy car in the truest sense, it looks, rides and feels like solid luxury. From the contoured, reclining front bucket seats to the Michelin* steel-belted radials; from the 4 wide-opening doors-(all with roll-up windows) to extra-generous trunk space, Renault is one car you can be happy with for

PARENTS LINKED TO CHEATING

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Pressure to succeed makes mid-dle class high school students cheat, and parents often indi-rectly encourage them to do so, according to a study present-ed to the American Anthropological Association.

"Students are consciously cheating to attain a grade, and in many instances their parents are indirectly encouraging such deceit. Parents are fostering a quest for success," concludes Danny Bergman, a student at Scotch Plains-Fanwood high school in Scotch Plains, New Jersey.

Bergman's paper, "The absence of guilt in cheating," was part of a symposium "through the eyes of students, an anthropological analysis of a middle class school system."

Of 113 senior English students Bergman surveyed, 95 per cent said they had cheated—even though 65.1 per cent of them thought cheating was wrong.

Parental pressure to achieve served as an indirect spur to cheating, according to Bergman.

Of the students that said they had cheated, 94.4 per cent thought their parents were very concerned about their grades . . . 73 per cent of the students said they had been rewarded

So the engine revs higher than I want it to. It doesn't accelerate much higher, but it does some, and I figure this might become dangerous if it gets worse. What could be causing this, and what can I do about it?—Mind of its own.
Dear Mind:

Sounds like loose engine mounts. As your engine twists in its cradle, it tugs against the accelerator linkage. Have a mechanic check.

Dear Jigs:
Tires do go out of balance as they wear, but the jiggle could also be caused by other things: weak shocks or a harmonic imbalance in any spin-ning part. You might try spinning part. You might by shalancing your front tires as the cheapest way to get rid of your bobble, but it might take (You can write to MIKE LAMM at Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

Dear Took: First, remember that you're living in one of the highest risk towns in the U.S. And driving one of the most expensive cars to insure. Insurance rates in San Francisco are out of sight anyway, especially if you've got a couple of tickets to your credit. HARROW BOMBED

LONDON (AP) - A fire bomb badly damaged a dormito ry at Harrow school early today and police said they were questioning a pupil at the exclusive West London boarding school. No injuries were reported.

A spokesman said police believed the attack on the 18th century Grove House was the result of a grudge 3 "This is a local matter," he said. "We are not looking for the Irish Republican Army or any other terrorist organiza-

Geoffrey Treasure, Grove House master, told reporters 62 boys were sleeping in the house when the alarm was sounded in the early morning. Three gasoline bombs were thrown into a public room from a fire escape, he said.

Among the boys in the dormitory were the Earl of Tyrone, 16, son of the Marquess of Waterford, an Irish peer, and David Macmillan, grandson of former Conservative prime minister Harold Macmillan and son of former employment minister Maurice Macmillan.

"We are very lucky that the fire drill worked very well and everybody was out of the building within one minute," Treasure said.

The entire top floor of the building was destroyed and common rooms on lower floors were damaged.

On the day that late chrysanthemums had their petals badly browned by night frost (27 degs. F. air temperature, and 20 degs. F. at ground level at our place), emerging leaves of the fall colchicums were seen.

The flowers belonging to these bulbs were ethereal lavender colored crocus-like goblets in late August and all through September.

They had no leaves then, and newcomers to the coast as well as new gardeners were properly impressed with the magic.

The leaves now coming through the soil are part of the normal cycle of this fine plant. Although they appear as circles of dark green wrap-pings this early, little more growth is seen until late winter when a tremendous spurt of energy takes them to a length of 12 or 14 inches

Now and in late winter, the circular folding of leaf tips in the wet soil reminds us of tulip leaves when they first begin growing and these are what newcomers believe them

Many an Easterner has ex-claimed about tulips beginning grow in winter.
What a marvellous climate we have in Victoria—but these are not tulips they are colchicum speciosus. The colchicum speciosus. The leaves are unlikely to grow above the ground so run little risk of frost damage.

A few of the winter bulbs are faking leaves too, chionodoxa and ipheion are two which come early, both blue. Any day will see the fra-grant and lovely Iris un-guicularis as dainty as a rainbow yet able to stand firmly against the cold of late November. With a spray of yellow Winter-jasmine, this blue iris is an unimaginable sur-prise for newcomers to find in a garden they may have acquired this year.

A new owner must constantly be watching for plants coming into growth or flowering during mild spells in our winters.

The first winter you won't know what to expect but you will learn the names of things as they come. Remember too where they are, for some plants die down in spring to be seen no more until the following fall.

The fragrant Witch Hazel, Hamamelis mollis, is a No-vember blooming shrub. The buds are there now if the plant received enough watering in early summer to make the new shoots on which flow-

The scent is delicious, and continues throughout winter for only a few blossoms open at a time, prolonging its season in a really satisfactory

In some city gardens you are likely to come across a dainty little white flowered tree, Prunus subhirtella autumnalis, a flowering cherry which blooms a little in fall and during mild spells in winter, with its main flowering in early spring. This is also a habit of cer tain trees of the Dogwoods Cornus nuttalli. You will see some flowering now, and again more profusely in spring.

When you are new to a wonderful place like this it is nice to know what to look for, since our winter gardens are full of interest in spite of rain

New Parksman Will 'Listen'

British Columbians are getting more say in the planning and development of parks, says Robert Ahrens, newlyappointed associate deputy minister in the department of recreation and conservation.

The appointment was announced by Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford on the weekend but Ahrens won't take over until Jan. 1. He has been director of the branch for several years.

In the past organized groups were content to recommend areas for parks but left their development and style to the parks branch, Ahrens

"On the whole they seemed to be satisfied with the way we were developing out parks," he said in an interview. "But now people want more input on how and to what degree they should be developed. This is a new trend and we are listening."

Commenting on Radford's statements that the workload of the department is increasing yearly. Ahrens pointed out the department is responsible resources.

"We are responsible for fisheries, the Provincial Museum," conservation of wild-life, parks, plus recreation," he said. "We also have to work with other departments, like forestry and hydro, in planning recreation activities.

"The public is expecting

As you can plainly see, fuel injection is to be found on some of the world's greatest cars. And, as you can also see, it's found on some of the world's most expensive cars.

However, from now on fuel injection will be standard equipment on one of the world's greatest, least expensive cars: The 1975 Volkswagen Beetle. And electronic fuel injection, at that.

In a nutshell, here's how our system works and here's what it does

An electronic brain, no less.

for you: An electronic brain receives signals from the engine, evaluates those signals, and in split seconds, determines exactly how much fuel should go into each cylinder. And then, again in split seconds, the fuel injectors actually inject only the precise amount of gas that each cylinder needs. (Also we might add, our system still only requires good old regular gas.)

Now, what all this means to you, is that you don't waste a drop of gas. Your engine runs more smoothly, more efficiently and more trouble-free. And that's just for starters.

As well, and at no extra cost, every VW Beetle is covered by the Volkswagen Owner's Security Blanket, probably the most advanced car coverage plan in the world.

LONDON (UPI) - The government announced plans today to outlaw the Irish Republican Army (IRA) and other such organizations in Britain to try to curb a wave of bombings that has left a toll of 48 dead and 750 injured here in two years.

Home Secretary Roy Jenkins made the announcement to a packed, frequently cheering House of Commons soon after six men, all born in Northern Ireland, were arrag ned-on murdeg charges in pub bombings in Birmingham last Thursday that killed 19 and wounded 184. *

Although Jenkins did not refer specifically to the Bir-mingham bombings, police had attributed them to the IRA which has denied them.

The IRA is banned in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic but until now has not been outlawed in Britain. Its aim is to drive the British Army out of Northern Ireland. The Taching oil fields lie in China's frozer north about 250 miles from the Russian border and a full days' journey by plane and train from Peking. Oil was first discovered there in 1959 and a year later thousands of workers and machinery from all other parts of China were shipped to the cold desolate plains to begin the battle for oil. other Western experts had said a viable resource industry could not be built in the area, but by 1963, the oilfield was in ful swing and China had become self-sufficient

The tour was very selective, however, and the buses which drove over bumpy roads and fields seemed to make long detours around certain areas of the oilfields. Picture-taking was restricted except where the delegation made official stops and the visit to the refinery was set for after dark when the CBC cameraman accompanying the group was un-able to film. The Chinese guides explained in great detail the production figures and records set by various workers but more pertinent questions about the number of wells and the total production of the field met with vague, non-answers and the familiar "it is

You will be wondering, I suppose, why I should be writing you this joint letter, my very first. Well. I just felt that you would want to know of the heart-breaking scene that occurs almost every day up on our road.

There are, you see, these two very old people who stand there by the mail box, pulling their shawls tighter to keep out the winter's chill. Their lined, ancient faces light up pathetically when, far down the road, they see the mailman's car. The ugly old man turns to the sweet old lady. His face lights up with idiot hope. "Will this be the day, perhaps?" he croaks. Then, suddenly, the mailman's car is whizzing by. The old couple, crushed again, their shoulders sagging, totter off to the old shoe in which they live. off to the old shoe in which they live.

It's not that your mother and I expect a letter every day, you see, or even every week. Heck, no. We knew, as all parents must know, that when you went out into the cold, cruel world, away from the nest, that you'd have lives of your own and that, at best, we might hear from you only now and then. But where is the now? Where is the then? And where are you, my darling daughters?

You will say, of course, as you have before, that writing is Daddy's business (you did know that, didn't you?) and that since you had elected to follow other, more sensible careers, you should be forgiven for not consigning to paper the details of your varied lives out there.

you should be forgiven for not consigning to paper the details of your varied lives out there.

I want to make it perfectly clear, as the man said, that I do not want literature from you. A stenographic report will do. I am not after deathless prose. Neither is your mother. All we want is a letter, just one lousy little old letter. If it is all in words of one syllable we will not care, I mean if you draw pictures that will be enough. Make a mark and mail it.

* * * Oh, I know, Letter-writing has gone out of style. You do phone, occasionally. I'll give you that, even if it is collect. But we're dreadfully old-fashioned, you see. A phone call is like a Chinese dinner. You're hungry 20 minutes later. I think, particularly, Judy, of your last call from South Africa. With all the crying that was going on I just can't remember anything that was said, here or there.

I know, too, that we're not alone in this parental dilemma. Just down the road from us I often see the Jenkins, themselves waiting patiently, their shawls wrapped around them, for some word—any word—from the son who, I gather, sent them a post card from Guatemala some 18 months ago saying, "Having a wonderful time—wish you were here." And was never heard from again.

Even so, I think we deserve better treatment. I mean it you add it all up there's about 60 years of clothing and feeding that we've invested and when you consider that all we ask is an occasional paragraph in return it doesn't seem too Oh, I know. Letter-writing has gone out of style. You do

ask is an occasional paragraph in return it doesn't seem too

And it's not as if you didn't have all sorts of interesting things to write about. People say to us, "My goodness, it must be an eye-opener having a daughter actually living there in Africa in this time of momentous change." How do you tell them, Judy, that the last news you had was about the time of the Boer rebellion? Or people say, "Is it true that your middle daughter is working with Liza Minnelli making a movie in Mexico?" How do you tell them, Jill, that you a movie in Mexico? How do you ten the sak how Andy is making out there in Castlegar in his last year of training as an airline pilot. What do you tell them, Jenny, when the mailman has passed you by week after-week?

I have thought of various ways to coax you into the most elementary kind of communication. I have thought of making out forms, for example, giving you each a multiple choice so that all you'd have to do is to check-off the appropriate answer. Like: I am feeling (a) fine; (b) getting over a cold; (c) rotten. Or, We have been enjoying the weather here except for (a) the hurricane; (b) the typhoon; or (c) the record snowfall. But since I abhor forms myself and since you all live in such-different places and styles I've given that up.

appeared from city streets about three decades ago.

The seminar, presented by the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre, concentrated on ways the public can make more efficient use of all forms of energy. The workshop on public transportation possibilities was one of five focussing on special areas.

Parker said electric engines, for example, are not running and wasting energy when the vehicle isn't generated as heat from brakmiles to the gallon and while full loads at rush hour they drop to a sparse number of passengers through the rest of the day and so average about the same fuel consumption per passenger mile as au-

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board and one of the panel members in the workshop said it is no longer a question of whether to develop good public trans-portation but of how to do it. And it is essentially a political question, he added.

Campbell said he doubts

any government will have the "guts" to penalize private car drivers ("they're all voters") to promote greater use of public transportation. But he suggested three areas for extra taxes to raise the money needed to develop mass transit systems.

The first is an extra tax on gasoline, the second an extra charge on auto licences, graded to increase with the weight of cars, and the third was a surcharge on land in newlydeveloped areas which would require mass transit to serve residents. Parker said public transpor-tation is essentially a land-use question where low density housing makes it difficult to build an efficient carrying

CHICAGO (AP) - Soybean oil futures moved to limits today, higher on the Board of Trade then closed with limit

Feed wheat

a bushel early, closed with a 17 cent loss while soybean meal, up $3 early, closed with a loss of $4. Wheat futures maintained a small gain at the close, but corn and oats prices were uneven.

Prices in the soybean complex were strong on the open-ing and into the last hour when profit-taking set in. Oil futures fell sharply, with distant options touching limits lower. The first gain in oil was 100 points, or 1 cent a pound, and at the close most options were down 100 points.

After oil fell soybeans gave way along with meal. Profit-taking was the main reason for the selloffs, but early buying was dictated by a strong cash market and good demand.

Ahint of new export business influenced buyers of wheat futures after an irregu-lar opening. The gains of up to 10 cents a bushel were halved later.

At the close, soybeans were 7 to 13 cents a bushel lower Jan. 7.24, Chicago wheat 1 to 4½ higher Dec. 4.77, Gulf hard red wheat not traded, corn 2 lower to %higher Dec. 3.48½ and oats ½ lower to 2½ higher Dec. 1.70.

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal government's attempts to create a bilingual public service could cost about $345 million if past and present expenditures are projected to the end of 1978.

CAPE TOWN - South Africa (CP) - Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the heart transplant pioneer, implanted a second heart in the chest of a 58-year-old man this morning. Groote Schuur Hospital announced.

It was the first time a new heart was implanted

Barnard said the unidentified man's own heart was the worst he had even seen but that he showed a market improvement immediately after the surgery. The man was

The heart transplant team, making its 11th operation, began the five-hour surgery at midnight Sunday night. The heart used was that of a 10-year-old Cape Town girl killed

VANCOUVER - A grocery store-proprietor killed during a robbery, an off-duty RCMP constable and student beaten and battered on Granville Mall, and a man stabbed by a panhandler when he refused to comply with a request for a hand-out — these were three violent incidents in the Van-

The store robbery, which took place Sunday in suburban Port Coquitlam, resulted in the death of John Tze Louie. Thieves grabbed $400 and shot Louie in the head.

Vancouver city police said they have been unable to dis-cover a motive for the beating given Const. Mike Ferguson, 24, of the Richmond RCMP and UBC student Jim Lawson, 27. They said a gang of five men attacked the pair with

The Taching oil fields lie in China's frozen north about 250 miles from the Russian border and a full days' journey by plane and train from Peking. Oil was first discovered there in 1959 and a year later thousands of workers and machinery from all other parts of China were shipped to the cold desolate plains to begin the battle for oil.

other Western experts had said a viable resource industry could not be built in the area, but by 1963, the oilfield was in full swing and China had become self-sufficient

The people here are fiercely proud of the community built at Taching. It is still considered something of an honor when Westerners are invited to visit the area.

Premier Barrett and his party arrived at Taching late Friday and early Saturday morning. They bundled up in Chinese longjohns, fur hats and thick cotton-padded coats for a busy day touring the vast oilfields where 200,000 people live and work.

The tour was very selective, however, and the buses which drove over bumpy roads and fields seemed to make long detours around certain areas of the oilfields. Picture-taking was restricted except where the delegation made official stops and the visit to the refinery was set for after dark when the CBC cameraman accompanying the group was unable to film. The Chinese guides explained in great detail the production figures and records set by various workers but more pertinent questions about the number of wells and the total production of the field met with vague non-answers and the familiar "it is difficult to say."

First stop on the tour was a small group See CHINA Page ?
